

PRETTY NEWARK GIRL ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Mortified and Chagrined at Fancied Wrong by Her Father

Julia Freiner Ran to Creek and Jumped Into Water.

Parents Objected to Her Association With Roy Dickinson and Made Her Return Home When She Started to Go Walking With the Young Man.

Filled with mortification and chagrin at a fancied wrong done her by her father, Julia Freiner, the 17 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Freiner who live on Grand avenue, East Newark made a desperate and nearly successful attempt to end her life Sunday afternoon between the hours of five and six o'clock, and today the young woman is suffering greatly from nervous shock, although she has sustained no physical injury.

The affair became known after the police had been notified and went to the scene too late however, to be of any service, as the whole thing happened in less than half an hour. An Advocate reporter called at the Freiner home Monday morning, and after much persuasion induced the young woman to come down stairs and tell her story in a straightforward and apparently truthful manner.

Miss Freiner is a beautiful girl of face and figure and her manner clearly indicated that she now realized that she had made a terrible mistake in attempting to end her young life, which is just opening to possibilities of success and happiness.

She said:
"I am 17 years old and live at home with my parents. We have lived in Newark since last August. Soon after we came here I met Roy Dickinson, a young man several years older than I, and he soon became my regular company. To this my parents objected, but I can't tell for what reason. Roy appeared to care very much for me and I returned his affection, and but for parental objections we could have been happy.

"On Sunday afternoon my sister, Carrie, Roy Dickinson, another young man and myself had arranged to take a walk. I was at my brother's Clarence Freiner's across the street, with whom I have been spending much of my time, working for him and his family. Roy came there but the other young man did not appear. We were getting ready to start and Carrie ran across the street to get her hat. She returned and we were about to start when my father came across and forbid my going. We had a few words and father began abusing Roy, who turned and went home. My father kept talking in a loud and threatening manner and finally took hold of me and tried to force me home and into the house. He finally let me go and I started for the creek, which is about a quarter of a mile from home. My sister Carrie, followed me, attempting to persuade me to come back, but I kept on, filled with mortification, wounded pride, and love which was being thwarted. I was determined to end all and after I got across the railroad tracks I ran to the bank and plunged into the creek.

"That is all I remember until I was pulled out by Mr. Sinsabaugh and brought home."

Asked as to her motive for such a rash deed, Miss Freiner burst into tears, and said she feared people would talk about her after the scene with her father. She was penitent and said she had no desire to repeat her experience, but nevertheless her family feel great uneasiness.

The father of the girl went to Short Creek, W. Va., near Wheeling, where he is employed as a general foreman by the F. H. Blodgett company, of this city, last April, and Sunday was the first time he had been home since. He left Sunday night for Short Creek.

Mrs. Ira Sinsabaugh, wife of the man who rescued Miss Freiner said that her husband was coming home when he passed Julia and her sister. As he was about to go into his home some one suggested that he follow the girl as she had threatened to take her life. He did so, and making a short cut heard her splash in the water. By the time he got to her she had already gone down twice. Charlie Lyle, a 16 year old boy, had plunged in after the desperate young woman, and had hold of her but could not rescue her. Mr. Sinsabaugh went to his assistance and she was soon brought to shore.

She quickly revived and fought desperately to get back to the water, but was forcibly prevented, and taken home.

Mrs. Freiner, mother of the girl, is nearly heartbroken over her daughter's rash act.

She said that her husband and she objected to Roy Dickinson because they feared he could not, or would not support their daughter if they married which Julia acknowledged were their intentions.

She did not know that the young man was vicious or of bad habits, but he was not a steady worker. He is the son of J. H. Dickinson, weighmaster at the B. & O. shops and lives with his parents 405 Eastern avenue.

This last place he worked was at Everett's glass works.

Mrs. Freiner says that her daughter has always been a good girl, and the neighbors also speak in high terms of the young woman.

There were some cruel rumors in circulation regarding the cause of the attempt at suicide, but Mrs. Freiner and Miss Julia both deny that anything caused it except what she has stated.

Destroyed Noah Brown's Barn Sunday at Pataskala—Loss $1800, Insurance $700.

(Advocate Special)

Pataskala, O., May 25—During a severe electrical storm which passed over this place Sunday morning about 5.30 o'clock the large barn belonging to Noah M. Brown was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The bolt of lightning struck a windmill in the upper part of the barn, and inside of thirty minutes the barn was destroyed. The barn was formerly used as a livery stable, but of late Mr. Brown had been using it as a private stable, and had quite a number of vehicles in it at the time of the fire. Everything was saved with the exception of two buggies and two carts. Mr. Brown estimates his loss at $1800. There was an insurance of $700 on the barn and $200 on the contents.

PANAMA ROUTE

May be Rendered Impossible Owing to Health Conditions—Report of Major Black Awaited Anxiety by Officials.

New York, May 25—A Washington dispatch to the Herald is as follows:

Will Major W. M. Black, corps of engineers of the army, now investigating health conditions along the proposed Panama Canal route, report that it will take a year and millions of dollars to put the territory in a safe condition? Or will he report that it is impossible for science to overcome the conditions of climate so that the sending of American workmen there will be anything less than a crime?

The answer is keenly awaited by government officials, who are becoming more and more appalled as the conditions in Panama are studied. That his report will at least show the necessity of a tremendous undertaking before any degree of sanitary safety can be obtained now seems assured.

Major Black has been long enough in the country to learn that the natives of Colombia care almost nothing for sanitary laws. Whatever is done must be done by Americans alone, and that clause in the treaty providing for joint sanitary control must be ignored before any results can be obtained. A clash of authority is bound to come at the outset, because one of the first necessities will be the destruction of many old frame buildings.

Grave doubts are felt in Washington as to whether this government can create health conditions any more satisfactory than the French, who found an unexpectedly bad health situation. Even after spending large sums, both by way of prevention and cure, the Panama route is still known in France as the "Death Ditch."

The true history of the death rate in Panama during the French operations has never been written, and to make a more thorough investigation of this question is one of the objects of Major Black's stay on the isthmus.

It is now thought within the bounds of likelihood that Major Black's report to the President will be of such character that the government will welcome any means, like amendment of the treaty by Colombia, for instance, to enable it to call a halt.

This operator also said that there are not 10,000 miners in the Kanawha and the New River fields combined. CHICAGO

FACES A CRISIS IN WORLD OF LABOR.

Laundry War is Still on and 7,000 Freight Handlers Prepare for a Struggle.

Chicago, May 25—The laundry war to continue, 7,000 freight handlers preparing for a struggle with every railroad centering into Chicago, 12,000 cooks, waitresses and waiters in restaurants and hotels clamoring for more pay, 8,000 barbers under orders to strike Monday, 5,000 stock yard laborers threatening to strike unless their demands are granted—this does the industrial situation shape itself for a crisis this week.

Laundry negotiations were broken off, but another attempt is being made to patch up a settlement. The general managers have not returned any answer to the demands, and would not state the nature of the reply that will be given. They evidently expect a strike and they are preparing to meet one when ever it occurs.

Because the union milk wagon drivers refuse to deliver milk more than once a day infant mortality in Chicago has increased 20 per cent. A man's meeting of women has been called in the hope that it may find means to fight the evils of the present system of milk delivery.

MOTOR CONTEST

Ordered Stopped Owing to Number of Fatal Accidents—An Auto. Reached Terrific Speed of 88 3-4 Miles an Hour.

(Scripps-McRae Telegram)
Paris, May 25—Great public indignation has been aroused by a list of fatal accidents which followed in the wake of the first stage of the Paris-Madrid automobile race yesterday. The automobile has received the worst blow since the hazardous sport became popular and in many quarters it is proposed that restrictive laws be passed. The race to Madrid is off as the Spanish premier, following the example of Premier Combes has forbidden the contestants to go at a racing speed on Spanish soil. The latest figures today give the number of dead six and six seriously hurt. The dust was so heavy on the highways that the contestants could not see each other.

Paris, May 25—The first stage of the Paris-Madrid automobile race, from Versailles to Bordeaux, 343 miles, was finished at noon Sunday, when Renault dashed into Bordeaux with a record run of 8 hours and 27 minutes. outside the city. The victories, however, were clouded by a number of serious accidents. Several cars were wrecked and a number of fatal accidents occurred.

"PEACE OVER AFRICA."

A New Poem by Edwin Markham on the Boer War.

At a meeting held to celebrate the anniversary of the declaration at The Hague for an international court of peace recently held in New York Edwin Markham read an original poem for the occasion. It was as follows:

"PEACE OVER AFRICA."

O bugles, ripple and shine,
Ripple and rapture down the wavering line!

Praise, praise, praise,
For the last of the desperate days!

Shake out the lyrical notes
From your cavernous silver throats;

First into joy mad carols once again
To herald the coming men.

O bugles, tell it to the opening sky
And go the rounds of earth and sky—
Peace on the wretched and the wretchedless Heads!

Peace over England, over Africa;
Peace on the living, quiet on the dead;
Peace on the souls hurried downward from the day.

Hushed down with hated breath,
To join the old democracy of death.

The challenge of the bugle and the glum
Rejoinder of the drum.

The neigh of startled stallions,
The hurried rhythm of the hot battalions,
The blown wild scent of crushed geranium.

The parley of the howitzers, the shrill
Crim colloquy of hill with hill—
These had their fateful hour. But now, even now.

A bird sings on a cannon broken bough—
Sings all the afternoon,
And when the dark falls on the shot torn walls.

Frail wings will come to wander in the moon—
Wander in long delight
Through Africa's star filled delicious night.

War's bitter root, and yet so fair a flower!
Sing and be glad, O England, in this hour!
But not as one who has no grief to bear,
No memories, no burden, no despair.

Be glad, but not as one who has no grief;
The victor's laurel wears a wintry leaf.
The clashing revel and the joy bells rattle,
But what is all the glory and the gain?

To those we owe behind the misty pane,
Whose Africa is crumpled to one grave,
A lone grave at the mercy of the rain?
Not all our odes nor all our orisons
Can sweeten these intolerable tears.

These silences that fall between the cheers.
In all the joy a memory cries and dwells,
A heart break, heretical farewells.
Let there be no more battles; field and flood.

Are sick of bright eyed blood,
Lay the sad swords asleep;
They have their fearful memories to keep.
These swords that in the dark battle burned.

Burned upward with insufferable light—
Lay them asleep; heroic rest is earned.
And in their sleep will be a kinder night
Than ever flowered upon the front of fight.

And fold the flags; they weary of the day,
Worn by their wild climb in the wind's wild way—
Quiet the dauntless flags, Grown strangely old upon the smoky crags.

Look where they startle and leap!
Look where they hollow and leap!
Tremulous, undulant banners, flared and burned.

Lying and dying momentarily in the wind!
And war's imperious bugles, let them
rest—
Bugles that cried through whirlwind their rest.

Wild bugles that held council in the sky—
They are aware of the curdling cry
That tells men how to die,
And cannons worn out with their work of war.

That brief, abrupt persuasion of the shell—
Let the shrewd spider lool' them one by one.

With filmy cables glancing in the sun,
And let the throats in their empty throats
Build his safe nest, and spill his rippling notes.

PIGSKIN TIRES FOR AUTOS.

Scotchman Invents Process to Make Hide a Substitute For Rubber.

John Muir of Leith, Scotland, who is at Colorado Springs for a brief vacation, says that pigskins will soon displace rubber for cushion tires for vehicles of all kinds. He is the inventor of a process for tanning which makes the skins harder than rubber, and equally satisfactory as tires, says the New York Times. He came from New York, where he sold American rights to a syndicate of capitalists, who will erect a demonstration plant immediately and afterward a factory to supply the market.

Similar rights have been sold for Germany, Switzerland and Austria-Hungary. Muir is confident of the speedy and general recognition of the merits of his invention.

TO IMPRINT THUMBS.

Important Addition to the Bertillon System at Auburn, N. Y.

Imprints of the thumbs, fingers and palms of all the prisoners now in the state prison at Auburn, N. Y., and of those hereafter received are to be made and kept on record, says the New York World. This is considered an important addition to the Bertillon system, as many criminals have been traced and apprehended through records of similar imprints in countries where it is in use.

Each prisoner will first place his thumb on a sheet of paper covered with printer's ink. The imprint of the inked thumb will then be made on a clean sheet of paper. Each finger will be separately taken, and the impression of both hands laid flat will be made.

Cheaper Panama Hats.

Juan B. Flores, a Peruvian manufacturer of panama hats, who was at the Hotel Baltimore in Kansas City the other day, says, according to the Kansas City Times, the panama hat will be just as popular this year, but that it will be less expensive than it was last summer. Mr. Flores says that he sold 7,000 dozen panama hats last season in the United States and expects to sell many more than that this year. He says the lateness of the spring season this year has hurt the panama hat business considerably.

THE FLAG IN BATTLE

WHEN OR WHERE IT WAS FIRST BORNE HISTORY RECORDS NOT.

Its Development From the First Inanimate Object Carried Aloft on a Staff—Dear to the Hearts of Fighters in All Ages and Nations.

Where in the whole world is another thing meaningless in itself that has signified so much or served so greatly in the dramas of national life as the flag? asks the London Globe.

One tradition says the Saracens first carried an orthodox standard into battle and thus gave the idea, as they gave so many others, to the crusaders. But obviously the flag is far older than this, and it is interesting to note its development from the first inanimate object borne aloft on a staff so as to be generally visible down to the complicated blazonry of a royal banner in our own ages. The Egyptians thus carried before their hosts the figure of a sacred animal on a spear, and the Assyrians, as their carvings tell us, inspired the hopes and centered the attentions of their soldiers in the same way. The royal standard of the Persians for many centuries was a blacksmith's apron, and it is said a local prince in passing a hermit's cell on the way to battle one morning asked the inmate for his blessing or something expressive to put on that artless cognizance.

The hermit, possibly a little touchy, as even saints will be when disturbed at breakfast time, threw the chieftain the flat, round cake he was eating, which was duly added to the apron; hence the Persian "sum." The lion was an obvious afterthought. The Turks used a horse's tail, the rank of a pasha being known by the number of tails he carried, and probably this suggested the much bifurcated pennon of early western chivalry familiar to every one who has studied the Bayeux tapestry or early illuminated missals.

In the middle ages, devoted to display and military arrogance, the flag stood in relationship to the great captain's array as his personal armor stood to himself; it insured recognition in the melee and supplied a rallying point for the fighters such as nothing else could have done. This led to an etiquette of flags which apportioned shape and size to every rank of the peerage, from the royal standard itself down through a varied array of banners, gonfalone, pennons, ensigns and other "bits of red rag," and kept the heralds' college busy, besides supplying the poets with admirable local coloring for their battle pieces. Does not Scott tell us in some famous lines:

Then fell that spotless banner white,
Lord Howard's lion fell;
But still Lord Marmion's falcon flew
With wavering flight, while never grew
Around the battle yell.

Here, to be noted, the whole gist and point of the fight centers in the pennons of the leaders, and of the same vital importance of the flag there are innumerable instances in medieval literature. When the Douglas unfurled his standard at Otterburn—a flag, by the way, which is still in existence—he declared, and thought not without reason, that the mere sight of that famous cloth would put the English host to rout. And even in comparatively modern and prosaic times the belief that a dreaded captain was beneath a certain emblem has sufficed to turn the scales of battle.

Thus in the French war of 1797 the French Rear Admiral Saury when cruising with six frigates in the bay of Bali came in sight of five or our Indianmen, one of them the Woodford, Captain Lennox. They were homeward bound and all richly laden, and to all appearances they had no chance of escape, when Captain Lennox rescued them by an act of great judgment and presence of mind. He first of all hoisted in his own ship a flag which the French admiral knew well, that of the British Admiral Raiter, blue, at the mizzen, and he made all the other ships in his company hoist pennants and ensigns to correspond. But he did more. He detached two of the Indianmen to chase and reconnoiter the enemy, and as these advanced toward the French reconnoitering frigate, the Cybele, the latter, completely deceived, made all sail to join her consorts, on which the French admiral, believing he was in the presence of a powerful British squadron, made off with his frigates under all sail, and Captain Lennox and his consorts completed their voyage in safety.

The flag indeed preserved its glamour long after the time when it was the cynosure of conflict, the emblazoned meteor of victory, as Milton calls it. Napoleon's officers, retreating from Moscow, burned their standards and in the excess of their bitter affection mixed the ashes with wine and drank them so. The same was done at Metz and Sedan, and even today there is probably no soldier in the world who would not do a little more for his colors than for anything else within his martial horizon. The idea has penetrated into all ranks of society. To nail one's colors to the mast is the last expression of desperate resolve, just as to haul them down indicates the abyss of humiliation.

TRUCK DRIVER AND HORSE.

How a Friendly Understanding Developed Between Them.

The friendly relations which exist between truck drivers and their horses is shown in the story of Chieftain, one of the tales in "Horsus Nine," by Sewell Ford. "Tim Doyle, the driver, having been left alone in the world, takes up lodgings in the stable. The story runs thus: So for three years or more Chieftain had always had a good night pat on the flank from Tim, and in the morning, after the currying and rubbing, they had a little friendly banter in the way of love slaps from Tim and good natured nosings from Chieftain. Perhaps many of Tim's confidences were given half in jest, and perhaps Chieftain sometimes thought that Tim was a bit sly in perception; but, all in all, each understood the other even better than either realized.

Of course Chieftain could not tell Tim of all those vague longings which had to do with new grass and springy turf, nor could he know that Tim had similar longings. These thoughts each kept to himself. But if Chieftain was of Norman blood, a horse whose noble sires had ranged pasture and paddock free from rein or trace, Tim was a Doyle whose father and grandfather had lived close to the good green sod and had done their toil in the open, with the cool and calm of the country to soothe and revive them.

Of such delights as these both Chieftain and Tim had tasted scantily, hurriedly, in youth, and for them in the lapses of the daily grind both yearned each after his own fashion.

And, each in his way, Tim and Chieftain were philosophers. As the years had come and gone, toil filled and uneventful, the character of the man had ripened and mellowed, the disposition of the horse had settled and sweetened.

In his earlier days Tim had been ready to smash a wheel or lose one, to demand right of way with profane unctious and to back his word with whip, fist or bale hook. But he had learned to yield an inch on occasion and to use the soft word.

Chieftain, too, in his first years between the poles had sometimes been impatient with the untrained mates who from time to time joined the team. He had taken part in mane biting and trace kicking, especially on days when the loads were heavy and the flies thick, conditions which try the best of horse tempers. But he had steadied down into a pole horse who could set an example that was worth more than all the six foot lashes ever tied to a whipstock.

Dr. Holmes' Table Talk.

At table Dr. Holmes was unlaggingly vivacious, ready at repartee, as witty as Lowell without Lowell's audacity at punning and for the immediate moment as wise as Emerson. Underwood, in his monograph on "Lowell, the Poet and the Man," has by some lapse of memory misquoted a passage of words that took place between Emerson and Holmes at one of the early Atlantic dinners. The conversation was upon the orders of architecture. It was Emerson, not Holmes, who had been saying that the Egyptian was characterized by breadth of base, the Grecian by the adequate support and the Gothic by its skyward soaring. Then it was Holmes, not Emerson, who flashed out instantly, "One is for death, one is for life, and one is for immortality." I did not hear this, but it was repeated to me at the time by one who did.—J. T. Trowbridge in Atlantic.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know It.

How To Find Out.
Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours. A sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.
There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing inflammation, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing men- tion reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

CANDIDACY

OF COL. GILLET LOOKS O. K., SAYS A FRIEND.
Newark Man Still in the Race for State Auditor—Reports from County Conventions.

The reports of several conventions throughout the state, which on Saturday endorsed the candidacy of W. D. Guilbert for state auditor, did not have the effect of casting a gloom over the headquarters of Col. M. M. Gillett in this city. On the contrary there is a feeling of jubilation that only about three counties out of the dozen or more, instructed for Guilbert.

Col. Gillett is out of town but a friend of Col. Gillett said Monday: "The resolution endorsing Guilbert was sneaked through the Franklin county convention by fraud and trickery. I have it from one of the men elected as a delegate that the attorney of Guilbert who is one of the Franklin county leaders, went to the door of the room where the committee on resolutions was in session, and called to them: 'Boys, put in a plank for Guilbert. It must be done.'"

"This resolution tacked on the end of the report was adopted with the report, and many outspoken Gillett men did not know it was in the report."

"We will have 6 out of the 20 delegates selected from Stark county in spite of the fact that they are instructed for Guilbert and Col. Gillett's candidacy never looked brighter than at present."

Babies' Crying.

The instant a child is born it cries. This is a providential expansion of the lungs and not, as many suppose, an indication of suffering or pain. Well developed, well formed and healthy babies cry lustily at birth, while the weak child has a feeble little cry. For the first few months the cry is tearless, and it is not till the second year that lachrymal or tear ducts are fully developed. After that there is a copious shedding, and a very slight cause will lead to crying.

Definition of a Baby.

"What is a baby?" is asked, and then the following complicated definition is given: The prince of walks, a dweller in Lapland, the morning caller, noonday crawler, midnight bawler, only possession that never excites envy, a key that opens the hearts of all classes, the rich and the poor alike, in all countries; a stranger with unspeakable cheek that enters the house without a stich to his back and is received with open arms by all.

Measuring Hides.

The ancient tanner paid an expert high wages to guess at the contents of his hides when sold by measure. Today an unskilled workman hands the irregular shaped pieces to a little machine that looks something like a table with a double top which, quicker than the mind of the expert can guess it, reckons with exactness the square contents in both the metric and standard systems.

Here's the Credit.

"There is one thing I like about your husband—he never hurries you when getting ready to go out with him."

"Very little credit is due to him for that, my dear. Whenever I see that I am not likely to be ready in time I simply hide his hat or his gloves and let him hunt for them up and down until I have finished dressing."

The Fight Over Roosevelt's Endorsement.

An issue has sprung up between Senators Hanna and Foraker over a proposition to endorse President Roosevelt for re-election at the coming Republican State Convention. The newspapers and followers of the two Senators are taking sides on the question and the indications are that a red hot contest is on hand, to be fought out.

Setting aside questions of personal politics, it seems to us from an unprejudiced standpoint that Senator Hanna is in the right in opposing an endorsement of Roosevelt for the presidential nomination by the State convention this year. It is a snap proceeding, this proposed endorsement for a year in advance of the usual time for such political strategy. It also proposes to bind the convention of next year, which, of course is a silly proceeding. Next year's State convention, which will elect National delegates, is the proper and legitimate body to make declaration on the presidential question. This snap proceeding indicates an anxiety on the part of the Roosevelt office holders, and the chapter of accidents always in reserve may disclose something prejudicial to the too "strenuous" candidate. There is no doubt that Roosevelt will get the delegates and instructions from Ohio next year, but the haste to pledge them this year is a disgusting proceeding.

The President's California speeches concerning the future domination of the Pacific ocean by the United States have been widely discussed and various interpretations have been placed upon them. The talk about dominating oceans is, of course, largely foolish, unless one really means that the countries surrounding those oceans must be dominated. We may, with great credit to ourselves, seek the pre-eminence in the world's trade, and may the fates speed us in achieving that destiny. Dominating oceans is another thing. Ancient Rome dominated the Mediterranean. But no one power will ever dominate the Atlantic and no one power will ever dominate the Pacific. The high seas belong to all mankind, and the nations that surround them are not likely to crouch at the feet of any Russian, German, English or American Caesar.

Would the steel trust be put out of business even by the entire repeal of the 45 per cent duties under which it practically monopolizes the home market and sells abroad $100,000,000 a year, much of it at a lower price than is exacted from our home consumers? Would the window glass trust lack reasonable prosperity if its 80 to 100 per cent protection under which it has more than doubled the price of glass were reduced? Do the manufacturers who export $100,000,000 worth of their products in a year, selling them in open competition in every market of the world, require any longer protection which averages higher than the war tariff of forty years ago?

That great lingering exemplar of the spoils system, Perry S. Heath, turns up with remarkable regularity in the discovery of irregularities during his connection with the postal administration at Washington. Such obstacles to favoritism as the law and the civil service were never permitted to stand in his way.

Roosevelt gave a small boy in California a severe lecturing for calling him "Teddy." Roosevelt should not blame the lad. Perhaps the little fellow didn't know the President's right name.

BRYAN SEES A GOOD EASTERN CANDIDATE

Regards Judge Parker or Edwin M. Shepard as Presidential Timber.

Says East and West Could Unite on Either - Believes Such Choice Means Carrying New York and States That Supported Him.

Sioux City, Ia., May 25.—William Jennings Bryan expects to support the next Democratic nominee for President. He expects the nominee for President will be an Eastern man, a New York man, and a "sound money" man. He expects the nominee will be elected, and he expects the nominee will either be Edward M. Shepard or Judge Alton B. Parker. Mr. Bryan's personal preference is Mr. Shepard, but he has stated definitely that he would support either of these two men.

These statements can be made as a result of a conversation recently had with Mr. Bryan, in which he has frankly discussed his views of the situation and told his reasons for the position he takes. Mr. Bryan does not expect to be a candidate for the nomination but he does expect to have a large part in determining who shall be the nominee. He expects to eliminate the men who are not satisfactory to himself, and that his process of elimination will leave in the field only the two men named. Either of these two, Mr. Bryan is positive, will be satisfactory to the Eastern wing of the party, and it is Mr. Bryan's expectation that either of them once endorsed by himself and his friends will also be satisfactory to the party in the West.

Mr. Bryan believes the political situation today is highly favorable to the Democracy. He wants Mr. Shepard nominated for Mayor of Greater New York the coming fall because he has no doubt of the election of the Democratic candidate by a large majority. With a majority of 100,000 for mayor, Bryan is positive that Mr. Shepard will be invincible for President so far as concerns getting the electoral vote of the entire state along with New York.

Mr. Bryan said on one occasion in substance: "If I take the position that I must oppose any man who bolted me then to be consistent and have any strength in my insistence on that position, I am equally bound to support any good National Democrat who has supported me and who has a chance."

Criticisms of the Army.

(Philadelphia North American.)

It is worse than idle to complain that General Miles or any other protestant against barbarity is keeping up an irritating controversy over Philippine cruelties. The whole subject would have been dropped long ago had the army been regarded enough of its honor to punish the guilty. When the war department ceases making excuses for acts which nothing can justify and evinces some genuine abhorrence for the misdeeds of brutal officers, criticism of its past policy will cease, but not until then.

W. D. BENNER.
JOHN C. MALONE.

County Treasurer.

W. N. FULTON, (2nd term).

Commissioner.

SIMON SHAFER.

WM. BOWERS.

BURR D. JACKSON.
PETER W. BRUBAKER.
C. S. HOWARD.

to lead the party to victory. It cannot be questioned that Mr. Shepard and Judge Parker are in this class. They are clean, strong, able men. Either of them in the opinion of most politicians can carry New York, which must be had and will be carried."

Mr. Bryan considers that Cleveland, Hill and others of their class cannot be nominated with his opposition because party leaders will realize the uselessness of the attempt to make the fight with the Bryan following opposed to the nominee.

Inasmuch as Mr. Bryan's conditions leave two strong and prominent New York men still eligible, he is confident one or the other of these will be named. In his discussions of the situation Mr. Bryan frankly admitted that he entered early on the campaign which has made his general views known, because he wanted the Democratic party to win in 1904, and he felt it his duty to serve notice that even for the sake of victory there were some things which he and his friends could not permit. Thus far he has confined himself largely to defining these things. But he is now going farther and making public his general position concerning candidates who would be acceptable to him.

He believes that his vigorous opposition has already killed off probably Hill or Cleveland. He understands further that there are men among the great Eastern financiers to whom Cleveland, for personal reasons, is almost as objectionable as Roosevelt. The possibility of Roosevelt receiving the support of the great business interests as against Shepard or Parker is regarded by Mr. Bryan to be not worth consideration.

He considers Roosevelt almost certain of defeat if the Democrats are wise. As between Shepard and Parker, Mr. Bryan believes Shepard the stronger and more reliable man. He is not entirely satisfied with the views of Judge Parker so far as he has been able to ascertain them, while he believes Mr. Shepard would make an excellent and independent executive, and would not bring the party into danger of disaster or defeat.

INFLUX OF FOREIGNERS

The Immigration Problem and Efforts to Solve It.

WHY RESTRICTION IS ADVOCATED

Commissioner Williams of New York Cites Facts to Justify His Belief That the Laws on This Subject Need Changing—One Reason Why We Do Not Get a Better Labor Class.

Steamship arrivals by steamship after steamship at New York of the great Atlantic fleets point the fact that this is to be a record breaking year in immigration, says the New York World. There are too many indications that the incoming flood of population is by no means made up completely of desirable elements. So the subject of restrictive laws of entry is once more a topic of conspicuous interest. In a paper contributed to the latest issue of the quarterly Federation, Immigration Commissioner Williams of the port of New York calls attention to the fact that we are today executing laws which were framed mainly in 1891 and 1893, since which time vast changes have occurred in the character and nationalities of the aliens who seek a new home in the United States. Any intelligent discussion of further requisite legislation must be preceded by a thorough appreciation of the changes above referred to, which have been so gradual that the country as a whole has only recently begun to realize that today we are adding annually 1 per cent to our population from portions of Europe which twenty years ago sent us hardly any people. To consider the topic of immigration today as meaning the same as it did in 1882, merely because in both years the total aggregate amount was about equal, is to entirely overlook the radical sociological, industrial, racial and intellectual distinctions which exist between the Anglo-Saxon, Teutonic and Scandinavian races and the Slav, Magyar, Italian, Greek and Syrian races.

It is almost certain, the commissioner considers, that had our early immigration proceeded from those portions of eastern and southern Europe which are now sending such large numbers of illiterate aliens into our great cities this country would not now enjoy its present civilization. The occupation of those who are now coming here and the portions of the country to which they proceed are roughly stated as follows: Out of 700,000 who arrived last year about 3,000 were professionals, 20,000 were skilled workmen, 420,000 were unskilled laborers and 160,000 were women and children with no occupation.

Seventy per cent intended to settle in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. New York state alone received over 200,000. Considerable loss there 20 per cent went west and about 2 per cent south. The statistics show, and it is a well known fact, that the great stream of immigration today is a city immigration, and that the bulk of the immigrants do not go, and cannot be urged to go, into the unsettled parts of the United States for the purpose of developing them. The pauper statistics show that about thirty aliens out of every 10,000 become objects of charity, whereas in the case of the native born, both white and colored, only nine out of every 10,000 persons become such.

It is probably true that the United States needs all the able-bodied and intelligent laborers that it can procure, and at the present time no steps should be taken which will result in preventing such people from coming here. On the contrary we must strive to keep out those who are below a certain grade of intellectual and economic fitness.

Germany and England have a large surplus population, and yet these countries are sending us but few immigrants. The commissioner says he does not attempt to answer fully the economic question suggested by these facts, but suggests that the present large influx of undesirable and unintelligent people from southern and eastern Europe may be at least one of the reasons why we do not get the better labor that used formerly to come here. The indiscriminate cry for additional labor is today largely the cry for the cheapest labor of Europe and Mexico, the presence of which tends to cheapen our standards, to drive out American laborers and keep the best European laborers from coming here.

The commissioner cites repulsive physical conditions which have led Health Commissioner Lederle to refuse any longer to receive immigrants with contagious diseases in the city hospitals (notwithstanding the receipts from this source amounted to $25,000 per year) and says: "In view of these facts and of the wretched appearance and absolute poverty of a considerable number of the aliens who arrived in this country during the fiscal year ending June, 1902, I think you will be somewhat shocked to learn that less than four-fifths of 1 per cent of these aliens were excluded, and you will agree with me that this percentage did not afford the country the necessary protection."

Costliest of War Ships.

The King Edward VII. will be the most costly war ship that has ever been constructed. The original estimates were for $1,500,000, and though they have been cut down it is authoritatively stated by prominent officials at Devonport dockyard that the total expenditure will amount to well over $1,400,000. This outlay on a fabric which a well directed torpedo might annihilate makes one realize how costly the game of modern naval war would prove.

Huge Stones From the Moon.

In a catalogue of Mexican meteorites prepared by M. Antonio del Castillo one mass is mentioned which exploded in the air and fell in widely dispersed fragments, portions of it being found in three places at the angles of a triangle whose two longer sides were some fifty-five and thirty-five miles in length. In one of these places two plates of stone were discovered, lying about 250 yards apart, which had evidently once formed one huge block. Measurements and estimations place the combined weight of the two blocks at eighty tons. In this one shower of "moon stones," according to M. del Castillo's paper, not less than 3,000 tons of rocks fell.

Opportunities.

However a man is gifted, whether for active enterprise of thought or charity, there lies around him a world of opportunity. So far behind are we socially, morally, intellectually, that one might be forgiven if he supposed the world were made and yesterday and nothing had yet been done. Does no ambition fire us to help the despairing, starving, sinking people around us? If a few more years be added to our life, would we not strive to put something right, to sweep out some little corner, to awaken some soul to see and rejoice in the growing light?—Good Words.

Bird Superstitions.

In many parts of England there are curious superstitions about birds. The stonechat, for instance, is believed to be continually chatting with the evil one, so it is held in bad repute, and as the raven commonly impersonates his noble majesty it is ranked in the same category of evil birds. Sometimes, however, the raven's appearance, so it is held, forebodes a death.

HARRY BROOKE

Newark Boy is Promoted by the Adams Express Company—To Manage Toledo Agency.

The many friends of Mr. Harry C. Brooke, son of Mr. John Lee Brooke, of this city, who for the past four years has been stationed at Grand Rapids, Mich., as the agent of the Adams Express office at that point, will be glad to learn of his well deserved promotion. A Grand Rapids paper says:

Harry C. Brooke, Grand Rapids agent of the Adams Express company has been appointed to take charge of the company's agency at Toledo. He will leave this city the fore part of this week to assume the duties of his new post. Mr. Brooke took charge of the Grand Rapids office of the Adams company four years ago, when he was transferred from Hamilton, O., to the local agency.

While still a young man Mr. Brooke has had nearly 20 years of experience in the express business. He began as office boy in the United States Express company's office at his home in Newark, Ohio, when he was 11 years old and has steadily advanced to the important position he is now chosen to fill. He left the United States company 15 years ago to accept a position with the Adams company and has served in that company in various capacities at Zanesville, O., at Indianapolis and other points before his promotion to be agent in this city. His appointment as agent at Toledo, which is one of the most important agencies in the middle west, is testimony of the high regard of his business ability by his employers.

During his four years' residence in this city Mr. Brooke has made a host of friends, both in business and social circles. Under his management the business of the local agency has been developed to a degree eminently satisfactory to the company. Mr. Brooke has local fraternal society ties which he regrets to be compelled to sever. He is worthy ruler of the Helen Gould circle of the Royal Circle and an active Forester. Mr. Brooke's successor in this city has not yet been announced. Mrs. Brooke, whom he married in this city, will join her husband in Toledo later.

HARVESTERS FOR KANSAS.

Over Sixteen Thousand Men Will Be Needed This Year.

Kansas will need 6,875 more harvest hands this year than have ever been called for since the state free employment bureau was established, says the Kansas City Star. The total number which will be needed to harvest the wheat crop, according to reports from township trustees, county clerks and grain dealers, compiled by T. B. Gerow, director of the free employment bureau, is 16,875. Conditions have changed to such an extent since the big crop of 1901 that all the harvest hands called for this year must come from outside the state.

In 1901 the drought affected the corn and other crops so that the Kansas counties outside the wheat belt were able to supply nearly all of the 10,000 men needed. Mr. Gerow has been unable to find a county outside the wheat belt which will be able to supply harvest hands this year.

Mushroom Color the Latest.

Champagne color, that hazy yellowish hue that has been the "smart" color of spring, must give way before a newer shade, says the New York Press. Champagne is the latest tint. This is a delicate brownish yellow, with a purplish cast. It differs from champagne only in a slight degree, but the dress-makers are making capital of the new color and insist that no wardrobe is complete without a mushroom colored chiffon. The manner in which foods are being represented in colors will pave the way for artichoke serge and lobster colored etamine.

CATARRH A COMMON COMPLAINT.

Catarrh begins with a stubborn cold in the head, inflammation or soreness of the membrane or lining of the nose, discharge of mucus matter, headaches, neuralgia and difficult breathing, and even in this early stage is almost intolerable. But when the filthy secretions begin to drop back into the throat and stomach, and the blood becomes polluted and the system contaminated by the catarrhal poison, then the sufferer begins to realize what a disgusting and sickening disease Catarrh is. It affects the kidneys and stomach as well as other parts of the body. It is a constitutional disease and as inhaling mixtures, salves, ointments, etc., are never more than palliative or helpful, even in the beginning of Catarrh, what can you expect from such treatment when it becomes chronic and the whole system affected? Only such a remedy as S. S. S. can reach this obstinate, deep-seated disease and purge the blood of the catarrhal poison. S. S. S. purifies and builds up the diseased blood, and the inflamed membranes are healed and the excessive secretion of mucus ceases when new, rich blood is coming to the diseased parts, and a permanent cure is the result.

S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable and a reliable remedy for Catarrh in all stages. Write if in need of medical advice; this will cost you nothing.

The Sacred Plants of the Druids.
The Druids held many plants sacred, as, for instance, vervain, selago, mistletoe, and among trees the oak and the rowan. There is, I think, no serious doubt as to the identity of any of these except the second (selago), which is generally thought to be the club moss. Oak mistletoe is certainly rare, and that may have been the reason why it had an especially sacred character, but it does exist.

A Poor Bureau.

COMRADES

OF THE OLD WAR DAYS RESEN-TED BLUE UNIFORM

In Which Fighting Joe Wheeler Appeared—Paid No Attention to the Gallant Cavalry Leader.

Atlanta, Ga., May 25—"Fighting Joe"
Wheeler, the dashing cavalry leader of the South in the war between the states, was persona non grata at the recent Confederate reunion in New Orleans because he appeared in the uniform of a general of the United States army. Heretofore General Wheeler has divided honors with General John B. Gordon at Confederate reunions, but there were no honors for him at the New Orleans gathering.

The old soldiers of the "Lost Cause"
resented the appearance of General Wheeler among them in a uniform of blue and they made him keenly feel their resentment. Veterans who were at New Orleans state that Wheeler was treated almost as if he were an enemy.

When he appeared in reunion hall
clad in the uniform of a United States general not a single cheer was heard.
Even veterans who had served under Wheeler had no greeting for the man whom they had followed in many a desperate charge. So far did the veterans carry their resentment that no provision was made for Gen. Wheeler in the parade, the ex-Confederates vowing that they would not march behind a man clad in the uniform which had been worn by their foes in four years of bloody war. One of the ex-Confederate Generals present even rebuked Wheeler for appearing at the reunion, clad in the uniform of the United States army.

"What do you think," this General asked Wheeler, "Lee and Jackson would say to your appearance at a Confederate reunion in that uniform?"

When General Wheeler realized the situation he hastily left New Orleans.
Wheeler, it is said, is deeply hurt by the attitude of his old comrades.

The General says that he appeared in the uniform he wore in the Spanish-American war to show the veterans that sectionalism was indeed over when a general officer of the Confederacy had the right to wear the uniform of a General of the United States army. The veterans think, however, that the uniform was out of place at their reunion. All of the veterans wear Confederate gray on these occasions, the officers appearing in the uniforms they wore in the sixties, and they march beneath Confederate battle flags.

RUMOR

Of Lightning Striking Court House is Due to Spot of Paint on Tower.
Repairs Begun.

Cliff Rosebrough has been engaged by the County Commissioners to paint the Court House tower from the weather vane to the roof. Cliff has secured the services of Mr. Charles Fox, who is one of Newark's most skilled scaffold hands, will do the dangerous swing work. The boys started on the upper part of the dome Saturday and after the storm Sunday people in the east end of the city noticed the spot of paint and not knowing of the repairs, started the rumor that the tower had been struck by lightning, which occasioned no little excitement.
The broken clock dial will be replaced by a new one. The letters marking the points of the compass and the weather vane will be treated to a new coating of gold leaf.

Shaving In Egypt.

The earliest reference to shaving of the beard is found in Genesis xli, 14, where we read that Joseph on being summoned before the king shaved himself. There are several references as to shaving in Leviticus, and the practice is alluded to in many other parts of the Bible. However, Egypt is the only country mentioned in the Bible where shaving was practiced.
In all other countries at that time such an act would have been considered ignominious. Herodotus mentions that the Egyptians allowed their beards to grow when they were in mourning. So particular were they as to shaving at all other times that to have neglected it was to make oneself the butt of coarse and ridiculous jokes.

Even in this day and age when the Egyptian wants to convey the idea of a man of low condition and slovenly habits he always pictures to you a man with a full beard. This notion is very ancient, a fact attested by works of art found in burial monuments dating back thousands of years.

Southern Europe.

A traveler writes: "I have often been struck by the ease with which people in southern Europe are amused. In Paris 100,000 people go out to Long-champs for the Grand Prix race, and half a million people go out and line
the roads on their return to see them come back. In Rome at the feast of the "Divino Amore" 5,000 people go out on the Campagna to a spot where once stood a temple to Venus and hold a picnic, while 50,000 go out and line the Apennin way to see them return. In Madrid this peculiarity is even more marked. On the Puerta del Sol about a thousand people stand around and do nothing outdoors, while crowds of people sit indoors or lean from balconies to watch them do it. And in Seville the idle rich sit in clubs and cafes on the Sierpes to watch the lower classes walk by, while the lower classes walk by to watch the idle rich sitting in the clubs and cafes on the Sierpes."

ATHLETIC PARK OPENED.

Two Games of Base Ball--Newark Y. M. C. A. and Columbus Maroons Defeated Denison--Former Granville Boy Wins Honor on Track--Sporting News.

With every prevailing condition being favorable the Y. M. C. A. athletic park at the corner of Eleventh and Church streets, was formally opened Saturday afternoon with appropriate ceremonies and a carnival of baseball, which was witnessed by a large crowd including many of the fairer sex.

It was a great day for Denison university in point of opportunity, as both teams, the 'varsity and second, had important games to play but from the standpoint of results it was indeed a gloomy afternoon.

Both Denison teams went down to defeat, the Y. M. C. A. boys taking a fall out of the academy in the first game, while the Maroons of Columbus were presented with a game by the 'varsity team.

The Buckeye band gave a preliminary concert in front of the Association building and at one o'clock the line of march was taken to the field. The band was followed by Mayor Crilly, Secretary Ebersole, the managers of the ball teams and others in carriages. Then came the four baseball teams who were to compete in the afternoon, and the Y. M. C. A. boys' brigade. The line moved from the Association building south on Third street to the North Side, around the Square to West Main street, out West Main to Fourth, north on Fourth to Church, west on Church to grounds.

Arriving there Mayor Crilly in a few remarks dedicated the grounds to the uses for which they had been established and tossing the ball the first game was soon under way.

It was agreed that the first game should be called in time to get on the Denison-Maroon game by 4 o'clock, and this was done at the end of the sixth inning, the score being 9 to 4 in favor of the Y. M. C. A. team. Pine pitched for the Newark kids and was given excellent support by Heisey, who caught an ideal game. The whole team put life and ginger into their play, and their victory was clearly earned. Perry played well at short and steadied the infield throughout.

The Denison and Maroon teams after the first game began play with little Columbus players at the bat. Denison presented Philpot, her crack pitcher, while the Maroons had Beach, an elongated twirler with good speed and plenty of curves.

The game started off like a pitcher's battle, each side going out in order in the first, but in the second the collegians began to do business with Mr. Beach's slants, and soon had two runs, aided by Fogel's bad playing. Webber was given a life by Fogel's fumble of his easy grounder, and immediately stole second. There were two gone and two strikes on Swing, but he caught one of Beach's out curves and straightened it out in the left for a pretty hit, scoring Webber. Swing later scored on a passed ball by Krumm. Another was added in the third by Scott who got two bases when Whisner threw his grounder over Key-ley's head, and scored on Roubush's two bagger.

Not till the third did the Maroons reach counting territory, and then they made three without a hit. Fogel got first on Roubush's error, and Philpot hit Jones. Whisner bunted to Green, who made a fearful throw, Fogel scoring and Jones going to third. Whisner started to steal second, and Webber's throw hit him on the side of the head, caroming into the left field, Jones scoring. Whisner finally scored on an error and passed ball.

Up until the eighth only one hit had been made off Philpot, and in spite of his awful support it looked as if he would win his game. In the eighth the Maroons fell on him for three hits and one run, tying the score, and in the ninth won the game. The following is the score:

OPENING NOTES.

A serious accident occurred in the first half of the sixth inning of the second game. Fogel hit to the infield and ran to first base, colliding with Barton while going at full speed. Both men fell in a heap. Barton screaming with pain. He was soon surrounded by members of both teams, and Dr. I. N. Palmer who was in the audience, went to the injured man's assistance. He found that the left hip had been dislocated, and that the player was suffering intense pain. Barton was placed in a carriage and hurried to the city hospital, where the bone was forced back into place. Saturday evening he was taken to Granville in Bowers & Bradley's ambulance and today is getting along in fair shape although he passed a very bad night Saturday. Young Barton is from Geneva, and is a fine ball player, and a thorough gentleman. His injury will keep him out of the game the rest of the college season and Chambers will take his place on the trip, when he is not pitching.

An old street car was placed back of the diamond along the first base line, and this was used as a band stand by the Buckeye Band, which during the afternoon enlivened things with some fine music.

The Denison "rooters" occupied positions near the temporary band stand and made the welkin ring with their "HiHe, HeHe." The crowd in the stands was bi-partisan, and both teams had sympathizers who gave them much vocal encouragement.

In the ninth Krumm was hit over the heart with a foul tip and for a moment was knocked out. He soon recovered, and pluckily resumed his place. Both catchers failed to use clest protectors.

Umpire Lyons gave very general satisfaction, but was away off in allowing Webber to bat after making a hit into the infield, on which he was thrown out. It was claimed that Webber attempted to get out of the way and the ball hit his bat. Well that may be granted, but the ball was fair, and Webber was clearly out. If he was standing within the lines of his position the ball was fair and he was thrown out. If he was outside the lines of his position, Webber was out under Section 4, Rule 46. The foul strike is defined by Rule 45.

Mayor Crilly's carriage remained during the game, and from it His Honor enjoyed the two games. The mayor is a "fan" and his attendance and unqualified delight in the games made him a "solid" with the crowd.

Three hits were made off Philpot in the eighth and two errors were made behind him, and the net result was only one run for the Maroons.

The errors of Trego and Swing were absolutely inexcusable being made on easy chances. Planagan's error was excusable as the ground in center caused a hit to bound away from him. The other fielders muffed easy flies.

Jones at second played a beautiful game, handling his nine chances with never a wobble and with the grace of Lajoie. He also scored two runs and made a hit out of twice up.

The Denison infield must take more time in making the throw to first. Only occasionally must the ball be "shot" over. "Scotty" is an old head and should coach Roubush and Green, and they should heed it. If a ball is fumbled there is no use throwing it to first in 99 cases out of 100. A wild throw is more costly than a fumble, and when the latter is made there is no use in risking the former.

The crowd was satisfactory and the opening was a grand success. Chairman Mazey, Secretary Ebersole, Manager Fitzgerald and all the rest are deserving of congratulations and well wishes for the new park.

COLWELL WON.

W. A. Colwell, son of Prof. R. S. Colwell, of Denison university won the two mile event at the dual track meet between Yale and Harvard on Friday. The New York Times says of this victory:

"The sensation of the day came when Colwell after his hard race in the mile, beat Franchot of Yale. For three laps the field kept well together but as the last lap was entered Franchot was in the lead with Colwell at his heels. The later paced Franchot and crossed the tape a yard in advance of the Yale man. Colwell left the track on the shoulders of his teammates, having won the hardest two mile race in the history of Harvard-Yale athletics."

Edward VII. Speech Writer.

An amusing aftermath of King Edward's Parisian visit comes in the form of the following story, says Harper's Weekly: The king, whom limitless practice in the long years of his life's apprenticeship made an expert in speech-making, invariably composes his orations on the spot and delivers them off-hand. But more reporters are not admitted to state banquets such as that given at the Elysee in Paris to the king by the president of the French republic. It followed that when the king was asked for the text of his speech for subsequent publication no text was forthcoming. His majesty had finally to follow the course of lesser mortals and write out his speech himself. And exactly the same thing occurred at the Hotel de Ville. In this case the delayed telegram begging for the speech only reached his majesty at Portsmouth, and he had there and then to set to work to write it. One wonders what became of those two pieces of copy and whether they will appear in the archives of the future.

HEROISM OF WOODSMEN.

Maine Men Suffered Hardships to Carry Dead Friend to Civilization. John Francis Haggerty, aged twenty-six, of Bangor, Me., left home on March 28 to work on Lawley Bros' log drive on the Allagash river and soon after arriving at the scene of operations fell sick and died in a few days, says the New York World.

When Haggerty died the boss of the drive, it is said, directed James Bell and Daniel Malloy of Bangor, two of Haggerty's friends, to bury the body immediately in the woods and lose no time from work. The men refused to do this and, abandoning their jobs on the drive, started to bring their dead chum's body out to civilization. The body was placed in a canoe and the long journey begun, but the river was so swift and full of rocks that in order to prevent capsizing the canoe Bell and Malloy were obliged to get out and wade in the icy water up to their waists.

In this way they pushed the canoe with its ghastly freight twenty-three miles down the Allagash, after which they struck into the woods on the way to Patten, Bell carrying the canoe five miles to the nearest water, while Malloy carried the corpse on his shoulder.

They finally accomplished the twenty-five miles to Patten, after a day on the river and a night in the woods, during which time they took turns at sleeping and watching their burden. When they reached Patten they were so weak that they fell at the hotel door, having had nothing to eat for thirty-six hours and having traveled forty-eight miles with the body of their friend. The body has reached Bangor, and Bell and Malloy have gone back to the drive.

CHICAGO'S ROSE FEVER.

Unhappy Inhabitants Also Suffer From Other Peculiar Ills.

Dust pneumonia and rose fever are two diseases Chicago is warned against, says the New York Times. The first is a menace to life, while the latter has a capacity for making its victim extremely uncomfortable. According to the city health department officials, the air is laden with germ bearing dust.

"To avoid dust pneumonia," said Dr. W. K. Jaques, director of the chemical laboratory, "stay out of dust as much as possible. Prevent dust from entering the room. A cheesecloth screen stretched over the window will keep out the dust." Rose fever attacks those who visit localities where great numbers of roses are in bloom. Pollen from the flowers enters the eyes and nose and produces painful irritation. "There are other causes of this disease," Dr. Jaques explained. "There are not enough roses in Chicago to affect the masses, but the pollen from fruit trees has a similar capacity to irritate. Persons susceptible to hay fever in August are likely to contract the disease. A number of Chicago residents who have just returned from New Orleans contracted the rose fever there."

PICKPOCKET TRUST.

Some of Its Methods Described by Chicago's Chief of Police.

Pocket picking is the latest industry to pass into the hands of the octopus, according to Chief of Police O'Neill of Chicago, says the Inter Ocean of that city. That a regularly organized syndicate exists in the profession, with branches extending throughout the entire country, the chief says the police have had occasion to learn to their cost in the prosecution of hundreds of cases against members of the fraternity. "Convictions of this class of criminals are almost impossible," he asserted recently. "If necessary, the organization will spend $50,000 to protect its humblest member. That's the reason so few pickpockets are ever sent to prison. Did you ever notice it?" "The syndicate's methods in the protection of its members are many," continued the chief. "False alibis play a prominent part. These are seconded by a liberal buying off of complainants, and when the evidence has been thus weakened powerful law firms are hired to do the rest. "The use of straw bonds is resorted to when everything else fails. If necessary, good bonds are given and jumped."

PLANTS THAT CLIMB.

Peculiarities of Their Leaves and Their Modes of Movement.

It is in the twining plants, such as bryony and hop, and the tendrill bearers, like vetches, that we find the highest development of the climbing habit. These plants live under unusual conditions. In order to gain the light they must seek rather than avoid overhanging foliage, and so we find the vetches, instead of turning away from the shadow toward the light, like most of their neighbors, boldly pushing up into the center of a bush to burst into blossom amid its upper branches far above their less daring neighbors.

But it is in the leaves of these plants that we find the most remarkable modifications adapting them to a climbing habit. The leaves of the vetches and vetchlings are pinnate—they bear a number of opposite ovate leaflets. The tip of the leaf stalk and the uppermost pair of pinnae are in the climbing species changed into tendrills—sensitive, twining, whiplike structures—which exhibit remarkable features. If the slightly curved, extended tendril of a young leaf of pea or vetch be watched carefully it will be found that it is slowly but incessantly moving round and round in a circle. If the tendril comes into contact with a twig it bends toward it and eventually takes several turns around it. Even a slight temporary irritation is sufficient to cause a bending toward any side.

Finally the tendril becomes woody and strong and forms a secure anchor cable for the plant. Not only does the young tendril rotate, but the whole leaf on which it is borne is in constant motion. The shoot to which the leaf belongs is rotating also, so that the tendril is sweeping the air with a complicated motion, in the course of which it is almost sure to strike against some stem or twig of the surrounding vegetation.—Knowledge.

MISS HAVENS

Prominent Newark Artist Who is Achieving Fame.—What Columbus Dispatch Says of Her.

Sunday's Columbus Dispatch contained a double column half tone reproduction of a photograph of Miss Belle Havens, taken by Miss Emma Spencer of this city, accompanied by the following notice:

Several years ago a coterie of young women art lovers in Newark, used to wander over that very lovely country stretching here and there and putting on paper the wonderful effects of sky and hills, of field and wood, and doubtless not one of them thought very much about the future save that life was very pleasant and these sketching trips wonderfully enjoyable.

One of these nature lovers, and an artist to the finger tips, was Miss Belle Havens, who studied with teachers in Newark and then went to New York where she was under the tutelage of William Chase at the Art Students' league and where she was very successful in her work.

Then, the first thing her friends knew, she had gone to Paris, that Mecca of all who are artistically inclined and to whom the artistic atmosphere of that charming city, is as the breath of life.

Here Miss Havens studied under Whistler, the erratic, brilliant master of the brush and pen, whose virility is known the world over.

During a sketching tour in Holland later where she studied under Hitchencock she was awarded a prize for excellent work, the judge being a no less important person than the great J. J. Shannon, whose reputation is beyond cavil, as every art lover can testify.

Last year she had work accepted by the Paris Salon (an honor much coveted, and its attainment superior to all other delights), the title of the picture being "Going Home." It was afterwards exhibited at the Pennsylvania academy.

Last summer Miss Havens spent sketching in Canada, and in the winter she was in New York, where she has a studio of her own.

This spring she was awarded third Hallgarten prize at the National Academy, New York, for which over 300 artists competed, and her work was accepted and favorably hung at the exhibition of the Society of American Artists.

There are two annual exhibitions of art in New York, one being the National Academy of Art, while the other is known as the "Society of American Artists." The former is the original art academy of this country and corresponds to the Royal Academy in England in its standing, power and influence. It is the one in which Miss Havens won the prize, although she had pictures in both.

In both associations four prizes are given for excellence of work, and in both there are several thousand pictures to select from, while, as in the National Art exhibition, there is, but space for about 300, so it can be seen that it is quite an honor in a city of the size of New York, the center of art in the United States, to have one's picture accepted for the exhibition.

The committee, or jury, which decides the hanging of the pictures, is composed of members of the society selected for their knowledge and ability.

Miss Havens is a landscape painter, and as such she has no use for models, but takes her work from nature. In the summer she seeks a quiet, sequestered spot, where nature in her beauty and simplicity can be transferred to canvases.

Thus it is that many of the beautiful spots of Licking county, will become familiar to dwellers in the east.

DR. SHEPARDSON

Starts on Tour of Southern California and Yosemite Valley—Goes to Alaska Later.

The Santa Barbara, Calif., Independent says:

The Baptist church was filled to the doors last night with people who went to hear Dr. Shepardson, the "wheel chair evangelist," speak on the subject of "Grumblers." The address was a straightforward statement of facts and the speaker gave some good advice to that class of individuals. "The Best Thing" will be the subject for consideration tomorrow morning and in the afternoon the speaker will talk on "The Bible—Where and What."

Rev. Daniel Shepardson and his wife have been at the Baptist church for the past two weeks conducting a series of revival services and tomorrow evening's meeting will be the last of the series. This will end their engagements for three months and Monday morning they will leave for a six weeks' tour of points of interest in southern California and the Yosemite valley. They then expect to go to Alaska, where they will visit many places of interest.

DR. ADLER ON CASSINI

Noted Jew Answers the Ambassador's Statements.

RUSSIA'S POLICY OF SUPPRESSION.

Jews Are Persecuted, He Says, From Living in Agricultural Communities, Then Blamed For Not Being Farmers—Restrictions That Are Placed Upon Them.

Dr. Cyrus Adler of the Smithsonian Institution, secretary of the International Jewish Association and editor of the Jewish Year Book, in the course of conversation the other day on the massacre of Jews in Russia, reviewed the statements of Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, in a recent interview given out by him, which Dr. Adler treated as an authoritative utterance, says a Washington special dispatch to the New York Times. Quoting the declaration of the ambassador that "the unfriendly attitude toward the Jews is due to the fact that they will not work in the field or engage in agriculture," Dr. Adler said:

"In 1890 there were more than 100,000 Jews in Russia engaged in agriculture, the larger portion of them being in southern Russia. It is true that the tendency toward agriculture on the part of the Jews in Russia has been arrested, but this has not been since 1891, when the May laws of 1882 put a stop to the migration of the Jewish inhabitants of towns into the villages. It is not generous for a country to prevent Jews from living in an agricultural community and then blame them for not being farmers."

"Count Cassini next charges the Jews in Russia with being bankers and money brokers and taking advantage of the Russian peasants in this way. He will probably not be inclined to assert that any really large percentage of the more than 5,000,000 Jews in Russia are bankers and brokers. Moreover, the ill feeling which he describes as existing between them and the peasants does not apply to this particular incident at issue. Kishineff is a town of about 140,000 inhabitants, so that the question of the fury of the villagers would hardly come into the discussion."

"Since the ambassador makes a great point of the unwillingness of the Jews to engage in agricultural pursuits, and since he proclaims the failure of the agricultural colonies, it might be interesting for him to know that in 1889 there were 278 Jewish agricultural colonies in Russia, in which were employed 63,223 people."

"The ambassador states that the Jewish genius is appreciated in Russia and the Jewish artist honored. The May laws, to which reference has been made, restricts the number of Jewish students at the universities and gymnasiums, carrying these restrictions even to private technical schools established by the Jews themselves. Jews were forbidden to be army doctors, the college for veterinary surgeons was closed to them, they were prevented from acting as engineers, excluded from the civil service and only allowed to become members of the legal profession upon a special permit from the minister of justice."

"One of the reasons mentioned by the ambassador for the hostility on the part of the Russians is the unwillingness of the Jews to assimilate. One single incident indicating where the fault lies may be mentioned. The last figures available to me for the recruits in the Russian army are those for 1896, which show that during that year 15,831 were drafted in the Russian army, yet none of them upon any account is allowed to become a commissioned officer. The Russian Jew has, however, the privilege of being killed in defense of his country. It is thus shown from a hasty examination of the interview of the ambassador that he has in no case given an accurate statement of the causes producing the riot at Kishineff under discussion, and one is led to the painful conclusion that he either is unacquainted with affairs in his own country or that he willfully intended to mislead the American people."

"It might not be without interest for the public to know how the particular massacre was brought about. A few days before the Passover a Russian disappeared in Dubossari. The rumor spread that he had been killed by the Jews for ritual purposes. His body was examined and the conclusion reached that his death could not have been encompassed for the purpose of securing his blood. Notwithstanding, a Russian paper published at Kishineff, called the Bessarabietz, published inflammatory articles against the Jews, and especially one just before the Russian Easter Sunday, and it was upon this day, and largely after leaving the church, that the Russians began to attack the Jews. There seems, therefore, to be a much closer connection between religious hatred and those riots than between them and the economic causes which the ambassador threw out."

"It may not be amiss in this connection to say, what is no doubt fresh in the minds of many American citizens, that no foreign Jew may enter the Russian empire for purposes of travel without subjecting himself to extraordinary restrictions, nor without agreeing to leave the country within a definite period. Such a restriction would even apply to a member of congress or of the British parliament or of the Italian cabinet, if a Jew. Something other than economic reasons enter here."

MEN'S FASHIONABLE BELTS

Correct Styles to Be Worn With Negligee Costumes.

The approved belt for masculine wear this summer with negligee suits will be narrow, varying from three-quarters of an inch to an inch and a half. The inch to an inch and a quarter widths promise to be the most used.

Various kinds of leather, seal, walrus, calf, harness and pigskin, will be used. Patent leather belts will be conspicuous by their absence. The buckles will be of nickel—to start with the least expensive—silver, gilt, gun metal and gold. The latter will be "the" thing if you can afford it; not every man can. If not of cold the next best thing is a buckle of sterling silver gilded. Plain substantial buckles will be in best taste; some will have square, others rounded, corners, but one and all will be simple in effect.

The black belt is noticeably prominent and comes in a variety of leathers—seal, walrus, calf and harness leather. Black stitching appears on the black belts and on the tan belts. The stitching is in self color.

The black belts will "go well" with the shirts in gray effects conspicuously set forth, and, on the other hand, the law of harmony in color which prevails in all good dressing dictates the tan belt with a suit in the homespun mixtures or any brown effect.

The tan belt will again be fashionable in pigskin, although calf, walrus and various other leathers are also utilized for belts in shades varying from tan to russet and what may be called a brown. The white belt to be worn with the white outing suit will be of kid with white leather covered, gilt or gun metal buckle.

SCHOOLMA'AMS CONQUER.

How Progress of Public School System in Philippines is Succeeding.

There is testimony that education in the Philippines under American auspices is going on more successfully than recent adverse reports would imply. The thousand American teachers there, assisted by 3,400 native auxiliaries, carry on 2,250 day, evening and high schools, with an enrollment in round numbers of a quarter of a million scholars, practically all of them eager to learn the English language as the basis of their school training and educational and social outfit. The report that there was opposition to this and a clinging to the Spanish speech on the part of pupils and parents as the only one needful turns out to be merely moonshine.

F. W. Nash, writing from Manila in the Educational Review, says that perhaps the best illustration of the advancement made in English education within the last two or three years is the fact that thousands of Filipino students who had never heard a word of that tongue three years ago are today able to receive in it instruction in the common school branches and to employ it freely in their conversation. Two years ago there were less than 200 native teachers who could give any instruction in English; today there are more than 2,000 actually teaching in this language and daily putting in practice methods and ideas learned in the American taught normal schools and from American teachers.

TO KILL GRASSHOPPERS.

Minnesota Entomologist Invents New Mixture to Destroy Pests.

F. L. Washburn, Minnesota state entomologist at the agricultural experiment station at St. Anthony park, has issued a pamphlet describing a new remedy for grasshoppers, says a St. Paul special to the Chicago Inter Ocean. He calls the new remedy the Criddle mixture, and he says that the difference between this poisoned bait and others consists in the substitution of refuse for the bran so commonly used.

This mixture is made of one part paris green, two parts salt and forty parts refuse. Enough water should be added to make it soft without being sloppy. It should be scattered about the fields well in quantity according to the number of grasshoppers. It is most effective when fresh, but will do excellent work when several weeks old, even after being washed by rain.

A NEW SANDWICH.

Novel Method of Serving Ice Cream on the Streets.

A new kind of ice cream sandwich recently made its appearance on the streets, says the Philadelphia Press. It is an English invention, but a bustling vendor has secured the American rights to it and has placed it on the market. Once the ice cream peddlers sold their wares on a slip of paper, which when the cream was eaten was thrown away. Then the ice cream sandwich as we know it now came into being. Now, however, we have a combination of the two, for the new sandwich is a cracker cup filled with cream.

The English process, which bakes the cracker in the form of a cup, also imparts various flavors to it, and the happy street urchin can eat his delicacy without having to throw the receptacle away, as he used to do, and without losing any of the cream by leakage as is now the case.

Salesmen in Russia.

"The 'drummer' in the United States has reason to thank his stars every night when they come out that he isn't doing business in Russia," said a salesman to a reporter of the Detroit Evening News. "In Russia the 'drummer' is rigidly discriminated against. He must pay a trade tax of $25.75 and a communal tax of $5.15, if a gentile, before he is permitted to do business. If he is a Jew his trade tax is raised to $257.50."

The Unstoppable Tiger.

Of all wild animals trained for menagerie and show purposes not one is as hard to conquer as the tiger. Compared to the training of lions and elephants the training of a tiger is as the breaking in of a vicious boardwalk to the first lessons in etiquette of a chubby Newfoundland puppy. Even the most expert wild animal trainers balk at an assignment to "break" a tiger. Not more than one in ten professional lion trainers has the nerve to try his hand at the great, ferocious, striped cats.

As a matter of fact, there is no such thing as a "tamed tiger." Few and far between there are instances where the animals are shown as trained and broken in, but the friendship of the animal for the trainer who may have befriended it for years hangs at the end of the man's black snake whip. From the day the acquaintance is made to the day man and beast are separated there is a stealthy warfare between them, the catlike slyness of the ponderous brute directed toward the one aim of killing the man and the vigilance of the master ever alert to frustrate that plan.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Harm Slang Does.

The use of slang tends to limit the vocabulary of him who uses it. Now, a limited vocabulary is almost as inconvenient at times as a limited purse, and it is far more inelegant. If there was practically limitless wealth within the reach of him who was minded to take it, it would argue a certain stupidity in any one who declined to avail himself of the supply. The same assertion holds true with regard to him who is willing to limit his choice of words. There is even more to be said than that. There is a limitless wealth of words at our disposal, but the most of us are too stupid to make use of them.

There are about 200,000 words in the English language. The average educated person is able in reading to understand perhaps 25,000 words, but most of us who write and speak limit ourselves to about 500 or 600. Indeed, there is a vast number of fairly intelligent people, or people who pass as fairly intelligent, whose working vocabularies do not comprise more than 300 or 400 words each.—Household.

Dishonest Croupiers.

Each roulette table in Monte Carlo has a chief, an underchief and seven croupiers. The roulette croupiers are ordered to keep their hands spread out open upon the table between the turns. This is designed not only to give confidence to the players, but to protect the bank against its own employees. Once it was found that a croupier who seemed inordinately fond of snuff had a spring bottom snuffbox. Every now and then he would set it down on a gold piece, and when he took it up the gold piece was inside. Another croupier was discovered to have a sort of funnel under his collar, which ran down to a money belt. Every now and then he would scratch his neck, and every time he did so the bank lost 20 francs.—Argonaut.

The Independent Boy.

The nonchalance of boys who are sure of a dinner, and would disdain as much as a lord to do or say aught to conciliate one, is the healthy attitude of human nature. How is a boy the master of society? Independent, irresponsible, looking out from his corner on such people and facts as pass by, he tries and sentences them on their merits, in the swift summary ways of boys, as good, bad, interesting, silly, eloquent, troublesome. He cumbers himself never about consequences, about interests; he gives an independent, genuine verdict. You must court him; he does not court you.—Emerson.

A Scotchman Who Smoked in Church.

Sir Walter Scott in his "Heart of Midlothian" refers to one Duigan of Knockdunder, an important personage, who smoked during the whole of the sermon from an iron pipe tobacco borrowed from other worshippers. We are told that at the end of the discourse he knocked the ashes out of his pipe, replaced it in his sporran, returned the tobacco pouch to its owner and joined in the prayer with decency and attention.

Bottles and Souls.

"Blow into an empty bottle," says the oriental proverb, "and you shall get a great response swiftly. It is not so with a full bottle, which answers not, being too heavy with wine. Therein is the soul like these, and from the full soul cometh no echo to words idly chanted, but the empty soul repeateth back each noise aloud."

Geology of the Heart.

"No," said Maude pensively, "neither Henry nor Charles for me. That's clear. I will not let Henry propose because he hasn't got the 'dust,' and I can't get Charles to declare himself because he hasn't got the 'sand.' However, there's old Mr. Richfellow. I'll keep my eye on him. He's got the 'rocks.'"

The Grotesque.

Canon Kinger, biographer and editor of Charles Lamb, once uttered this pithy saying: "You may preach like an angel, but if you can whistle on a stick people ignore your preaching and speak of you as the man who can whistle on a stick."

What He Married On.

"Tom Higgins married, you say, on $10 a week? That took nerve anyhow. What was he working at?" "Nothing. It was the girl that was earning the $10."

ing for several kilometers, wheel to wheel, and was completely overturned in a ditch near Montguyon. Mr. Stead was caught under the machine while his chauffeur was hurled to a distance of 30 feet and had his head and body badly cut. Mr. Stead was conscious when he was picked up, but complained of suffering great pain. He was conveyed to the nearest farm.

It is stated that Louis Renault's automobile attained at Boudiniere, between Chateaufort and Bonneval, a maximum speed of 88 3/4 miles per hour. Numerous other accidents occurred.

In view of the number of accidents, some fatal, Premier Combes has forbidden the continuance of the contest on French territory. The second stage of the race, which was to have been continued on Tuesday, included a run over French territory from Bordeaux to the Spanish frontier. Premier Combes's action will probably lead to the races being abandoned.

It is reported that the Spanish government has forbidden the continuance of the race on Spanish territory. The illuminations which were fixed in honor of the automobile race have been countermanded as a sign of mourning for the persons killed during the contest.

Press Comments.

London, May 25.—Most of the papers this morning comment with satisfaction on the stoppage of the Paris-Madrid automobile race. They dilate on the dangers of racing, but offer no suggestions as to the prohibition or regulation of such racing in general or the James Gordon Bennett cup race, which is to be held in Ireland, in particular.

gers were slightly injured but there was no loss of life.

HUNDREDS MADE HOMELESS.

Enid, Okla., May 25.—Hundreds of persons were rendered homeless and property damage estimated at $300,000 was done in the Enid bottoms alone by a cloudburst that struck west of this city.

A bank of water three feet high and 200 feet wide, swept down through the bottoms carrying houses and everything before it. It came upon Enid without warning, while most of its citizens were asleep. Within a few minutes a hundred houses were partly or completely submerged.

Rescuers went to work immediately and all labored industriously saving persons from perilous positions and aiding those driven from their homes.

Sunday it was found that several hundred were homeless. Many pitiable scenes were witnessed.

The citizens are busily engaged relieving the distress but the means at hand are inadequate.

The rainfall of the past ten days has been the heaviest in the history of Oklahoma, and indications are that more will follow.

MAN KILLED AT PITTSBURG.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 25.—A terrific thunder storm, accompanied by a high wind, struck this section Sunday evening, and besides killing one man, did considerable property damage.

Milton W. Robinson, a resident of West Pittsburg, drove to Schanley park with a party of friends for an afternoon's enjoyment. When the storm came up Robinson sought shelter from the drenching rain under a big ash tree in Panther hollow. He had been there but a moment when lightning struck the tree, literally tearing it to pieces and killing Robinson instantly.

The manufacture of artificial rubies, which in appearance are as good as the natural stones, is now an accomplished fact.
